Opus Thirty Three Bagatelles is a collection of finely crafted haikuesque poems, marked out for their candour and observational precision—

‘I relish these sharply observed, finely concentrated moments of insight and wit.’ Catherine Belsey, author of Critical Practice

‘Poems sharp in definition, concise, deceptively simple and allusive.’ Eliza Granville, author of Gretel and the Dark

‘I am reminded of T. E. Hulme’s imagist poems I discovered as a teenager through Herbert Read’s The True Voice of Feeling. Laurel is a distillation of mood, atmosphere, feeling, expressed in a direct and surprising way, with the infinite - sky, sea, moon, sun - brought close to us and homely.’ Garry O’Connor, author of The Vagabond Lover
